Dear CITs,

We look forward to having you at the CIT retreat to take what you already know about camp a little deeper so that we can all function as a smoother unit when you arrive at camp for your appointed session. Mr. Wood and I feel confident that camp is the prescription for whatever may "ail you. It annually restores our perspective on life. I guarantee you that you will find something to bring back home that will be a source of satisfaction and know that you will have fun.

For the retreat, please mail us a new health form. Check in at the lodge porch for cabin assignments and pertinent information. Bring twin bed linens and towels. Please wear closed-toe shoes and leave sandals and flip flops at home as you will be playing harder than usual and need shoes with structure. Leave valuables at home, as well as gum and candy. Do bring bug spray and sunscreen. Do bring a swim suit as you will receive training in and practice assisting at the lake and pool. Lifeguards must demonstrate lifesaving skills and provide an American Red Cross Card that attests to your current status.

Regardless of how many times you have participated in CIT training, you must train with us again prior to coming back to camp. New things are always uncovered, but we must turn our attention to the old verities of keeping children safe and healthy, if we wish to be part of a well functioning camp community. CITs learn and re-learn everything necessary to assist in the kitchen and in the cabins, as well as have fun and make some new memories together. That's a tall order. Several of you will be called upon to teach segments of the training. Call me if you know a training segment that you particularly would like to teach. (Hint: that would demonstrate leadership.)

You may prefer a bedroll or sleeping bag to traditional bedding. Pack according to possible weather contingencies, and pack with it in mind that you will get wet in the creek or mud puddles, should it rain, multiple times.

Thanks for being the heart beat of Camp Windhover!

Mrs. Celia, Camp Director/ Co-owner
